[SrvScr_ORSCREENINT_v1r0] Oral Cancer Screening

Oral cancer screening is an examination performed by a dentist or healthcare professional to look for cancer in your mouth. This is different from a regular check-up at your dentist.

During an oral cancer screening, your provider may do one or both of the following exams: a visual exam in which the provider looks inside your mouth for patches or mouth sores, and a physical exam in which the provider feels for lumps or bumps in your mouth. Your provider may also ask you to rinse your mouth with a special blue dye that highlights abnormal tissue, or use a special light to make abnormal tissue appear white.

[SrvScr_COLSCREEN_v1r0] Colon and Rectal Cancer Screening

47. Have you ever had any of these tests or procedures for colorectal cancer or other medical conditions? Select all that apply.

[NOTE TO PROGRAMMERS: IF 88 IS SELECTED, DE-SELECT ALL OTHER RESPONSES]

0 Colonoscopy

Before the procedure, it is likely that a medicine was given through a needle in your arm to make you sleepy. A healthcare provider used a long tube-like instrument to examine your colon and check for cancer or other problems. Someone else needed to drive you home.

1 CT Colonoscopy

Also known as a “virtual” colonoscopy or CT colonography, a special CAT scan of the lower part of your colon that made detailed pictures of your colon to see if there were colon polyps or cancer. Your body passed through a large tunnel-shaped X-ray machine.

2 Sigmoidoscopy

Also known as flexible sigmoidoscopy. You were awake and not given medicine to make you sleepy. A healthcare provider used a short tube-like instrument to examine the lower part of your colon and check for cancer or other problems. You were probably able to drive yourself home.

3 Proctoscopy

Also known as a rigid sigmoidoscopy. You were awake and not given medicine to make you sleepy. A healthcare provider used a thin, tube-like instrument with a light and a lens to examine the inside of your rectum and check for cancer or other problems. You were probably able to drive yourself home. This test is rarely used now and was more commonly used in the past.

4 Stool (fecal) test

A test for blood or abnormal DNA in your stool. This test is sometimes called a fecal occult blood test (a FOBT), or a fecal immunochemical test (FIT), a Stool DNA Test (Cologuard®). These tests should be done at home and the sample is mailed in.

Also known as Pap smear or cervical cytology. A healthcare provider used a plastic or metal instrument called a speculum to open your vagina, and used a soft brush or plastic spatula to collect cells from your cervix. The cells were checked for cancer or signs that they may become cancer.

[SrvScr_ENDOSCREEN_v1r0] Endometrial Cancer Screening

121. Have you ever had any of these tests to check for endometrial cancer or other conditions? Select all that apply.

[NOTE TO PROGRAMMERS: IF 88 IS SELECTED, DE-SELECT ALL OTHER RESPONSES]

- 0 Transvaginal Ultrasound

Also known as a pelvic ultrasound, pelvic ultrasonography, gynecologic ultrasound, or endovaginal ultrasound. A healthcare provider inserted a wand- like device called a transducer into your vagina to make the images of your tissues and organs.

1 Hysteroscopy

A healthcare provider inserted a thin, flexible tube through your vagina to look inside your uterus and check for cancer or other problems. It is likely that you were awake and may have had numbing medicine, but were able to drive yourself home. Your provider could also have given you a sedative to relax you, in which case someone else needed to drive you home.

2 Endometrial Biopsy

A healthcare provider used a plastic or metal instrument called a speculum to open your vagina, and inserted a very thin, flexible tube into your uterus. Then, using a suction, the provider took a small amount of tissue through the tube. The suctioning took about a minute or less and was likely done in your provider's office. The tissue is then looked at under a microscope to check for cancer or other problems.

3 Dilation and Curettage (D&C)

Before the procedure, it is likely that a medicine was given through a needle in your arm to make you sleepy. During this surgical procedure, a healthcare provider enlarged (dilated) your cervix and inserted an instrument to scrape tissue from inside your uterus. Someone else needed to drive you home.
